District Pleasure Resort

Driving home the fact that the straw hat season has really opened and that warmer days are not far distant, the East Liverpool district's pleasure resort-Rock Springs park, in the neighboring city of Chester-will formally open tomorrow.

And judging from the improvements made at the park, which, not many years ago, was recognized as one of the best equipped resorts in the country, the Chester baven of amusement, is gradually climbing back to the place it occupied before the Pennsylvania railroad decided that it should devote more attention to the freight business and less to passenger traffic

In the pre-war days, when it was possible to buy a good cigar for five cents, Rock Springs was the mecca for thousands of summer excursionists. Under the ownership of C. A. Smith and the direction of William Hocking and Samuel McCutcheon, whose names were bywords in park management, the West Virginia place thrived. Its attractions compared favorably with those to be found at Euclid Beach and Luna park in Cleveland and it was not second to Pittsburgh's Kennywood or the amusement centers of Canton, Youngstown and Akron.

And, if C. A. Macdonald, present lessee, is given the encouragement that his ambitious program deserves. Rock notchers in parks. Even today it is far ahead of tural meeting held in the Dominican Republic. many resorts which have not suffered the setbacks that haven fallen to the lot of the West Virginia amusement those in the United States, but in addition there are place. For, aside from its natural beauty, it has amusements that appeal to adults as well as children, not to mention a bathing pool, boating lake and other features.

Rock Springs is a community asset, for its picnics not only advertise East Liverpool but prove a boon from a business standpoint.

School Lunchroom Expensive

Among other somewhat surprising statistics given out from the state auditor's office recently were figures showing that fifteen of the ninety-three cities of Ohio expended more money for lunchrooms in 1926 than sixtythree of the ninety-three cities did for school libraries, the lunchroom expenditures in the fifteen cities being $264,035.61, of which $75,306.29 was for help, while the library expenditures of the sixty-three cities were $157,-882.71, of which $82,990.78 went for help. In other words, the fifteen cities spent $118,729.32 for food and supplies and the sixty-three cities paid out $74,391.93 for books

Columbus led the expenditures for school library pur poses with $23,816.95, Cleveland was second with $21,-860.04, 92 Bellefontaine was lowest with $8.05. Greenville, with $4.39, had the highest per capita expense per student, while Youngstown, Barberton and Struthers each had a per capita expense for library purposes of one per cent. for each student.

In the matter of expenditure for lunchrooms, Toledo student and Findlay was lowest with ten cents.

Hagen Is Money Player

American golfers find solace for the defeat of Miss Glenna Collett in the British tournament by reason of the recent victory of Walt'r Hagen, who, in a typical rush, annexed the open links title.

It was just like Hagen to win the championship on the heels of his overwhelming defeat at the hands of Archie Compston. Only a born competitor could have recovered sey; U. S. Steel Corporation; and Union Pacific. his touch in so short a space of time.

Against Compston the redoubtable Hagen played commonplace, uninspired golf. A week later, in the British open, which is recognized as the major golf competition of the world, Hagen had his teeth in the title has been found nevessary. The modern points came contest all the way. He was again "the great Hagen," to whom golf players the world over doff their hats.

With a major title at stake, the pinch hitter of the links once more delivered his hammer blows at the psychological moment. You may not like Hagen in the same way that you like such lovable characters as Bobby Jones, Francis Ouimet and Johnny Farrell, but you have to admire Sir Walter's raw nerve under terrific tension. What a man!

Not once in the British open did Hagen strike a superlative streak of crazy golf. He very seldom does. Grim, hammer-and-tongs fighting is Walter's forte. He literally forced himself to win-pulled himself up by his boot-straps to the matterhorn of golf. He rode his game as merciless as a great jockey drives home a sluggish favorite. He went to the bat in the argot of the race track, and jabbed home the rowels. He fought his way to form.

In Hagen golf has the classic example of the money player.

Just as Bobby Jones is the world's greatest amateur, so is Walter Hagen the world's greatest professional.

Petroleum Peace

It was announced recently that the Huasteca Petroleum company had accepted, for its properties, the Mexican oil land settlement worked out by President Calles and Ambassador Morrow. This is one of the most significant things that have happened in Mexico for some

The company in question is said to be the largest foreign oil concern in Mexico. Its past policy has been opposed to that of the Mexican government. Its opposition has set the policy and pace for other foreign-owned oil companies. When it agrees to the new arrangement, others will follow.

Add this to other notable evidences and prophecies of peaceful co-operation between this country and Mexico.

Once Overs

Maybe you don't get angry in your home and tear things up"-but there are worse things than that.

You may be a nagger, finding fault with many things, and this is worse than having a real fight and settling back into a congenial routine afterward. The most aggravating person is the one who is full of little thrusts. Then if there be retaliation from other members of the household, it means that disturbed conditions continue most of the time in the home. Often the man who will overlook petty annoyances at the shop or office is most easily irritated when something displeasing to him is done by a member of his family. If the same effort to keep things smoothly running at the office, were made at home there would be happier homes. It is unfortunate that often the man who seems most congenial among those with whom he works is the greatest bore in his own home. Usually the man who raises the least disturbance at his work causes the most uneasiness in his home.

Unusual interest is attached to com-mencement exercises next Friday in view of the fact that Dr. J. L. Clifton, state director of education, will de-liver the principal address.

While the entire program is not complete, it is planned to include the high school orchestra, now the largest in the history of the school, and the boys' glee club.

This year's graduating class falls below the level of recent years. The decrease in the number of graduates may be attributed, school heads point out, to the number of removals which occurred when local railroad workers and their families were transferred to other points on the system. However, all indications point to a decided increase next spring because of the unusually large number of stad ents in the junior class this year.

Principal Alexa der E. Hilton today annous ed that reserved seats for the commencement ceremonies will go on sale on next Tuesday at the C. N. Brannan Drug store. Seniors will receive their tickets this afternoon and the teachers theirs on Monday.

Senior class day exercises were scheduled today in the school auditorium. Songs, the class history, class prophecy, a playlet, quartet and other musical selections are on the program. Rev. Thomas Berger, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, will leliver the sermon at baccalaureate services on Sunday night. The Junior Senior banquet, final class event price to commencement, will be held Tues day night in the gymnasium.

TURN GUNS ON

B. & O. Engineer Attacks Construction Estimates.

CITES HILLY ZONE

No Decision Expected for at Least Three Months.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 18.— Heaviest guns of the three big trunk line railroads opposing building of the new railroad linking Youngstown with the Ohio river, were unlimbered yesterday for continuation of an attack on the enterprise.

The assault got under way late Wednesday when E. L. Gosnell, engineer for the Baltimore & Ohio rail-road, attacked construction estimates made by the Pittsburgh, Lisbon & Western Railroad company, propon ents of the proposed new 41 mile line, as being too low.

Gosnell declared it would require an expenditure of at least $8,600,000 to build the road, which is about $3,500,000 in excess of the estimate submitted to the interstate commerce commission by the P. L. & W. The questioning developed the fact that Gosnell and other engineers had made much of the inspection from an automobile, stopping only occasionally actually to inspect the site of the proposed line.

Gosnell said the territory just north of Smith's Ferry was very hilly for about 13 miles. Then the right of-way traversed a rolling plateau until the edge of the divide sloping down into Youngstown was reached. A map he introduced showed that only two small areas on the proposed line would be more than five miles from an existing lin of railroad.

Plan Bridge at Grimm's. One was an area of about 11 square miles just north of North Lima and the other one of about six square miles half way between Smith's Ferry and Negley. The opposition carriers introduced this map in support of their contention that the area to be served by the proposed line already has adequate railroad service, but Gutheim showed that traffic from most of the area into Youngstown would be by such circuitous routes as to render the present roads of little value to the city.

The applicants estimate for bridges and culverts totalled $889,000 while that of Gosnell was $1,931,000 more than twice as large.

Gutheim developed that Gosnell's estimates called for longer bridges over the Little Beaver at distances four, seven and nine miles above the mouth than at the mouth the appli cant figures on several bridges about 100 feet long, while the opponents claim the bridges should be over 300

At one point, called Grimm's bridge, the opposition engineers figured on a railroad bridge 390 feet long when a highway bridge which Gutheim said was "right alongside was but 160 feet long.

Guthelm's questioning was designed to show that the opposition was over estimating construction costs.

Although Gosnell finished his direct examination about 20 minutes before the conclusion of Wednesday's session, Attorney August C. Gutheim opened up such a detailed cross examination that it is very unlikely the hearings will close before late Fri-

Despite the great interest being shown in the proceedings, it is hardly likely that the commission will hand down its decision on the application for at least three months.

"Both sides will be permitted to file briefs and it is possible that an examiner's proposed report will be submitted to the full commission," Director Burnside, in charge of the hearings, said when asked regarding progress of the case.

Attorneys for the P. L. & W. are opmistic that the application will be ranted. Should this prove to be the case, Youngstown will be placed in a position to give the Pittsburgh and Chicago iron and steel districts a real battle for supremacy in this great in-

On the other hand, if the New York Central carries out its implied action and reduces freight rates on coal from the Pennsylvania mines, Youngstown will get great benefits from the present fight even if the construction application is denied. Although making no direct promises, Attorney Clyde Brown, counsel for the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, has indicated that it will be possible for that road to give Youngstown reduced rates by means of a combined rail and water haul.

In fact, all three railroads have been basing their main opposition to the new railroad on the grounds that the present carriers are giving Youngstown ample and adequate service and on the promise that if it is possible for the P L. & W. to put in ex-water rates that they can do likewise.

The Pittsburgh, Lisbon & Western

Railroad will build its proposed short line railroad into Youngstown if the interstate commerce commission con sents, regardless of whether carriers now serving the Mahoning valley re-duce their freight rates or not.

E. Lesher, executive vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal company, made this positive declaration today when counsel for opponent roads attempted to show the need for the pro lect would disappear if the existing carriers reduced their rates.

Rivals Battle Tonight at Smith Field.

N the wind-up contest of the sec-ond week of the City league's 1928 campaign John Fowler's Turk Nash club, in second place today, goes into action against Chester tonight at Smith Field.

The Turk Nash combine is holding Pittsburgh down second place at the present time and a win will clinch their hold, for the time being at least. They have turned in two victories and suffered one defeat, and are in front of the K. T. K. nine by a half-game. If they lost tonight's engagement, they will go into a tie with the Potters.

Having gotten their first taste of victory, the West Virginians may be just a little harder to lick now. Last night they trimmed the Madison Bil liards, registering their first win in four conflicts, one of which, a tie, does not count in the standing.

JOHNSON RAPS

State Treasurer Calls on Gov. Gore to Act.

An "immediate and searching investigation" was requested of Gover-CLASS PLAYLET nor Gore today by State Treasurer W. ly convicted in the Kanawha county courts of misuse of state funds.

The state treasurer made his request in asking the governor's office to provide him a copy of the Bond charges, which he said were "practically all a repetition of the charges filed against me by Mr. Bond with TO MEET MONDAY the governor in 1926, and to which I made a detailed answer on September 27, 1926."

Johnson, who is a candidate for re election, said in a formal statement that "it is apparent that the so-called expose is a frantic effort made in the closing days of the campaign to discredit me in the eyes of the public and bolster up the waning political fortunes of my opponent," John L. Miller, of Charleston, who also seeks the Republican nomination for state treasurer.

Concerning the charges made by Bond, which included use by Johncertain banks and payments to persons for services who were not employed by the state, the state treasurer said:

"I have not paid out one dollar of state funds, except for services actually rendered, nor received one dollar to which I was not legally and honestly entitled.

"The public will, in my opinion, demand positive and dependable proof of the correctness of these charges before giving them any serious consideration. I have no fears that the members of the Republican party will repudiate me because of my exposure of the irregularities in the administration of the state auditor's office, and put in Mr. Miller, who was employed in that office continuously from October 1, 1909, to March 1, 1928, and was so employed during the time the will meet at Huff's Drug store at 7:15. reached such gigantic proportions."

Announces Candidacy for Re-election to Ohio Bench.

COLUMBUS, O., May 18.-Formal announcement was made here today Judge Florence E. Allen, Cleve land, of her candidacy for re-election as a member of the Ohio supreme

She stated that it is upon her record as a state supreme judge that she is asking for the support of her friends for election to a second term. "Believing that the judiciary should be strictly non-partisan, I have always sought nomination by petition in my judicial campaigns and I shall follow the same course this year," Judge Allen declared.

'The executive committee of the Cleveland Bar association last year recommended that all judicial candidates secure their nomination by pe tition and that they should not solicit contributions from lawyers," Judge Allen continued. "I have always believed in these policies as applied to judicial candidates and have carried them out in my former judicial campaigns.

LONDON, May 18—A romance which began in Detroit, Michigan, united two rich American families yesterday when Miss Muriel Sisman was married at the Bayswater Fresbyt ian church to Horace Dodge, son one of the founders of Dodge Broth ers, Detroit automobile manufacturers. The ceremony took place at $22 p. m., in the presence of about 200 friends and relatives.

session May 26 and begin a leisurely trek to the national conventions, under plans finally approved by adminstration leaders.

The tax reduction bill alone stood as a barrier to the adjournment but administration leaders hoped for its passage in the senate today, a quick settlement of all differences between the house and senate and its final enactment by the end of the week. It was whispered, however, that failure to pass the tax bill would not delay the adjournment as the tax reduction would be applicable to 1929 payments and could be enacted next December in plenty of time to become effective next year.

When President Coolidge affixed his signature to the flood control bill, it was said, all chance for a summer session vanished. This was the one piece of legislation, according to leaders, which might have postponed the date of adjournment or possibly have after the conventions.

The final enactment of the farm re llef bill removed another though less er obstacle to adjournment on May 26. It was quietly but authoritative ly stated that the president will veto this bill and that no attempt will be made to enact it over his veto. Farm leaders were said to have agreed on this course because of the hopelessness of any attempt to get congress to make it a law over the president's formal opposition.

Pass Merchant Marine Bill. The new merchant marine bill also was to go to the White House today, after its final enactment by congress. This action likewise removed opposition to the May 26 adjournment date, as the president was said to favor the bill in its present form.

The Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam bills, both of which were on the administration's legislative program, were in the background. The Muscle Shoals measure was in conference, with indication it would be reported back and finally enacted later in the week or early next week. It likewise was said to meet with presidential ap-

The Boulder Dam bill was pending in both house and senate, with its chances for enactment at this session doubtful. Senator Johnson (R) of California, was leading a stubborn though apparently forlorn fight to have it enacted in the senate, while Representative Swing (R) of California, was conducting a similar battle in the house. Reports indicated it might pass the house next week but filibuster, fully capable of defeating it, is in waiting in the senate.

The adjournment of congress May 26 undoubtedly will find the tax reduction bill a law along with the

Narrative of Love and Struggle Against Temptations

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

Then Emily would bring Raggedy and put him through his tricks; make him sit up and beg for a bit of sugar or crouch with his nose on his paws as if he were pray-

"I didn't suppose any animal could know so much, she would declare, all excitement. "Why, if you scold him he'll come up and offer his paw just as much as to say, "It's all right; I'm sorry and now let's forget and be friends.' There's almost nothing he doesn't under-

"Oh," Marty would answer with an air of settling everything, "that's blood. Can't get away from it-from Emily talked it over with Muz one day. think it makes so much difference with people? Blood, I mean? What is an aristocrat and how are they different from others?" She almost said "from us." "Is one an aristocrat because he knows who his great-greatgrandfather was?"

That seems to be important, baby. The idea of going far back—if a grandfather came over in the Mayflower it seems to be awfully important. I don't know why. They were mostly poor, I guess, those that landed in the wilderness and began to build homes for themselves. Some times I fancy they'd be pretty surprised at seeing themselves held up as a sort of standard. They were just folks from all I've ever been able to learn, and hard

"Now it isn't considered aristocratic to work hard. don't know, dear-I can't understand-And Emily didn't know and couldn't understand,

Once she took Raggedy for a walk and encouraged him to run on ahead, thrilling to his fine air of pride, the way he held his head back and glanced importantly down his nose, his manner of pausing and standing like a statue, one fore-foot lifted.

Oh, a noble fellow, that Raggedy! And he was hers A gorgeous, thoroughbred creature who gave her all there was of loyalty, loved her with every beat of his valiant heart. Just an ordinary person, she was; just Emily Day. But Raggedy was blue-blooded.

Now a little dog of no special breed or claim to charm ran out of a yard and began yapping. Raggedy whirled, teeth bared, gave his challenger a speculative look. And turned his head on one side as he trotted away quite as if the cur didn't exist.

It was so human, such a complete snub, that Emily shook with laughter. She called, "C'mere, dog! So that's how you feel! Well, that's right, old fellow—be exclusive. He'd carry a dinner-pail, that one. He's not your

But here a wail of terror brought her about and she saw the Brent dog, big lumbering creature, setting upon the cur. Raggedy also saw and puppy thought he was, crouched for an instant with his rose down, muscles quivering under his wiry coat. It is said the airedale has got a sizeable distance away from his ancestor, the wolf, but none who has seen him about to spring into battle believes that. Raggedy sprang-reached for the deadly throat hold.

But the Brent dog jumped backward, slash out with his jaws, and the airedale's blow glanced off. He rolled over in the dust two or three times and raced on up the hill, tail down, yelping, while the small dog scuttled to Raggedy came back to Emily, stepping high, though a line of red trickled across his paw. She knelt down in the road with her arms around him, face against his strong neck.

"All for that wretched little mongrel—oh, Raggedy!
He's Em's brave lamb! Let her see, now—oh—" It seemed terrible that his beautiful body should be injured. She gathered him up and tried to carry him but-be squirmed out of her arms and went limping along. When they came to Frances Haiden's shop she took him inside and asked for a bandage. "All for a no-account little cur, it was," she explained. "He saved it from a big dog and now he's hurt." "You'd not have him lay down on the job, my dear?" "It wasn't his fight."

"Ah, wrong there. It's the nature of the thoroughbred, you see, to protect what is weaker than itself. That is the job laid upon intelligence finer and heart higher that the ordinary by the Creator of those. It is the law of compensation which always is just." "You mean-why-oh, really! Is that what the aristocrat is then? The one who protects others not so strong as himself?'

Mrs. Haiden turned out the gas under a vat, wiped her stained hands on a stained rag, thoughtfully lighted a cigarette and sat down to talk. She often did this when Emily came in with questions. Her clear, analytical viewpoint and her rare capacity for encouraging thought were developing in the girl the thing toward which all education tends—the ability to use her mind.

"What," she began, "is the aristocrat? You see a person who possesses wealth and place and power-one who controls the destiny of others—and you say 'He's an aristocrat.' Why? Because a part of the earth belongs to him and his name is in the social register?

My dear, in all the history of the world there was but one true aristocrat and he hadn't even a home. Much was offered him—all the splendors of the world, I believe -but he turned from this.

"His sense of value was sure, you see; he knew the vanity of temporal power. Others have had that and their names are forgotten but his stands through the centuries, a living thing. Peasant and patrician! He died as a criminal because the captains and the kings couldn't understand . . .

"The Germans have a saying, 'Adel sitz im Gemuethe, nicht im Gebluete.' 'Nobleness is of the mind, not of the blood.' Not a thing of inheritance, not vastness of pos session nor pride of place.

"Genuine aristocrac · is of the heart and of the mind; kindness, gentleness, a sense of fair play, the willingness to serve. It is noblesse oblige of the soul. Do you see, "It's different, isn't it? You hear people talk of 'blue blood.' What is aristocracy of achievement?" "That is those other things combined with the will to do. To achieve unselfishly end worthily expresses all the rest. For one cannot mount the heights without bringing to others the beauty he finds there. Beethoven's symphonies, Edison's feats, the structures that stand like monuments to Stanford White's genius — all evidences of distinction, my dear. Hard work behind the aristocracy of achievement. And that is the only sort of aristocracy which has any real place in the world today.

Especially in America." This gave Emily a great deal to think about . Leading Raggedy home up the hill, stepping loftily as if the bandage about his paw were a decoration, she kept thinking "In the mind-not in the blood-the real thing.. Your blood needn't be blue if you keep yourself kind and sweet and willing to help others. Willing to help those not so strong as yourself. As Raggedy did the little dog. Like-well, Kent did that for me; the true aristocrat-

Kent is that. Kind, willing to serve.

"But there must be this other thing to make it count; the will to do. To soar. Hard, sometimes, that would As if I were to climb up North Mountain out at the end of the road here. Very high and forbidding it looks. I think my feet would slip on the rocks and my hands often be torn . . .

"Maybe I'd never reach the top, quite. But at least I'd rise above the level where I am now. Even a little way up there'd be clearer air and I could see farther. "Hard work . . . yes, I can work hard. That's what Agnes meant when she said 'get ahead' Only she couldn't use the right words-make it all seem wonderful as Frances did.

"Ho-hard work! Aristocracy of achievement! What do I care for the Tin Badge of Caste Some day . And the gray eyes darkened with emotion. At this moment the sun caught some bright surface at the very tip of North Mountain's summit and flared in a blinding ray of light. She saw it as an omen; achievement beckoning like long finger of white fire. A sense of destiny, like solemn, martial music, swept Mechanical Intonations Solve Problem of Translating.

IDOLS ARE DUMB

Automatic Arrangement Will Prove Boon to Actors.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Mechanical voices will "double" for film stars in 'talking" pictures of the future, says Director Fred Niblo.

The automatic voice, recently demonstrated by Sir Richard Paget, Britsh inventor, will prove a boon to ac tors when they are called upon to speak their titles, he points out.

Mechanical intonations also will solve the problem of translating spoken litles for foreign audiences, ac cording to Niblo who predicts that the "talkies" eventually will force high priced title writers in idleness.

Predictions are that many titles of the future photoplay will be spoken by actors interpreting the cinema characters, Niblo says. "Already several studios are concentrating upon this phase of picture progress. And here is the reason for the me chanical speaker.

Many an idol of the screen, Niblo observes, whose eyes and gestures speak volumes on the silver sheet is dumber than an animal actor when essaying the histronic.

This has been proven with the Vitaphone, Photophone and other screen sound synchronizing devices,"

Niblo contends.
"More carefully pitched voices are required for screen projection than for phonograph or radio recording, his noted director says. Lillian Gish, for example has a pleasing voice, but it is too highly pitched and does not record as well as other types.

Foreign stars, such as Vilma Banky and Dolores Del Rio would find diffi-culty enunciating American titles distinctly, because of foreign accent. "Stars employed by these corpora-tions need to cultivate their natural voices to a high degree or broadcast by proxy of the mechanical voice which may be selected as soprano or alto, depending upon choice. 'A technical difficulty is presented in translating title into the foreign language of various countries exhibiting American pictures," says Niblo. 'At present, any type of sound reproduction is actually attracted to the film, unwinding as the picture unfolds Additional difficulty would arise if American stars were required languages, to meet the international
